

REYNA
CAPITAL ADVISORS

January 2026 Investor Letter

I often tell my kids about what it was like when I was their age. Their typical response is, “Dad, that was back in the 1900’s.” Evidently, there is no difference in their mind between 1990 and 1909. But as I’ve repeatedly sat down to write this letter, I realize... they might actually be right. The specific events surrounding the market are different, but the prescription for moving forward is the same.

For market goesers, January felt like the last Mission Impossible movie where the entire story line gets jam-packed with nonstop action (spoiler alert – February hasn’t been any different). Last month we; kidnapped Venezuela’s president, brought criminal charges to The Federal Reserve, and tried to annex Greenland. As a result; gold and silver went bananas, foreign leaders went to the Davos Economic Forum ready to fight, and the US Dollar saw a significant drop.

If you’re thinking “sweet mother, what does the rest of the year have in store?” that would be completely justified. But here’s the thing, as much as my kids make fun of me for growing up in the 1900’s, the principles that drove markets back then still drive them today.

We know:

- There is a constant shift between euphoria and despair as people try to get what they want in life
- As these shifts happen, there will be changes we agree with and disapprove of as a win some / lose some process unfolds
- And the result of this process is growth through volatility

Despite how social media has changed the perception of the above drivers, they have nonetheless remained the same.

As such, we take comfort in knowing our foundational process of investing in well managed businesses at reasonable valuations has stood the test of time. Being flexible for the inevitable change that takes place over the short-term and having a foundational process that is well rooted allows us to adjust our sail for the current waters while maintaining our heading for longer-term success.

A few market specific highlights follow below.

US Markets

Markets have started to pivot with who gets rewarded and by how much. We are well into earnings season with more than half of the companies reporting 4Q profits. Growth as the natural state continues to be the current environment, but there has been a shift in sentiment. Investors want more out of big tech and are reticent as they balance positive earnings announcements with big spending on AI (see below).

On aggregate, last quarter's profits reflect healthy growth as they have come in ~ 7% above analyst estimates. However, not all companies feel so positive. Software companies in particular have gotten shellacked despite having improved outlooks. The main culprit is a forward-looking shift that AI will make many software type businesses obsolete as consumer behavior defaults to utilizing ChatGPT (or some other equivalent) for their needs.

Precious Metals and the US Dollar

Gold and silver have been on a wild ride. With all the geopolitical fervor, there have been 2 driving forces behind this. First, central banks have begun to diversify away from the US dollar and into metals as trade and tariff threats continue. Second, retail investors have bought into the momentum adding volatility to prices. Silver, often called the devil's metal, went from $72 to $115 and back to $79 all within the month of January!

The US Dollar has been in the headlines quite a bit lately for its decline. While I could write on this topic at nauseum, I will sum it up as this; nobody should be surprised by US Dollar weakness. The subsequent coverage in the media is a day late / dollar short.

Part of President Trump's policy outlined before his inauguration was to bring manufacturing back to America's shores as a matter of national security. His Chairman of the Council of Economic Advisors published a paper at the end of 2024 outlining what pretty much happened in 2025. Everyone agrees manufacturing has been on the decline for decades. The tool selected to reverse course was to weaken the dollar to make foreign goods expensive and domestic goods cheap.

Despite what we have come to believe over decades of politicians telling us a strong dollar policy is good, the fact is there are positives and negatives. Our concern shouldn't be if the US Dollar is going up or down, but rather if it is stable – like the world's safest investment should be.

The Federal Reserve and Interest Rates

January saw a meaningful shift in 2026 interest rate cuts. There are now 2 interest rate cuts priced in compared to 4 at the beginning of the year. While "data dependency" will rule the day, I can see rates staying flat should inflation maintain its stubborn nature and jobs maintain its latest positive path.

The wild card in this equation is the new Fed Chairman. Kevin Warsh who was recently nominated to be the next chairman has a history of being quite hawkish! For reference, see the graph below from Bloomberg's Chief Economist Anna Wong as it gives a great illustration of Warsh's hawkish history.

This is the exact opposite of what President Trump wants and has said that if Mr. Warsh wanted to raise rates, he would not have been nominated. We'll see which Kevin Warsh shows up as chairman. The dove that Trump wants or the hawk that he was.

(As a reminder, the chairman is only one vote and while there has been a long-standing precedent at the Fed for the Chairman to build a consensus, there is also a strong culture at the Fed for intellectual rigor and making the right decision, irrespective of politics. Regardless, ALL parties should be supportive of an independent Federal Reserve.)

In closing, there are lots of changes that seem to be new. The reality is they are the same issues we've dealt with for decades. They're just dressed up differently than before. Throughout history Presidents have pushed for lower rates, just not on social media. Throughout history technology has threatened the status quo, just to get adopted as commonplace. And for thousands of years, we've found a better path to move forward. I'm personally excited for the times to come and the opportunity that will be afforded to those willing to grasp it.

All the best,

A handwritten signature in black ink, appearing to read "Bernanke". The signature is fluid and cursive, with a large initial "B" and a long, sweeping underline.

Reyna Capital Advisors, llc ("Reyna Capital") is an investment adviser in North Carolina. Reyna Capital is registered with the state of North Carolina Securities Division. Registration of an investment adviser does not imply any specific level of skill or training and does not constitute an endorsement of the firm by the Commission.

Reyna Capital only transacts business in states in which it is properly registered or exempted from registration. A copy of Reyna Capital's current written disclosure brochure filed with the SEC which discusses, among other things, Reyna Capital's business practices, services and fees is available through the SEC's website at www.adviserinfo.sec.gov.

The investment return and principal value of an investment will fluctuate. Therefore, an investor's account, when liquidated or redeemed, will almost always have a different value than that shown herein. Current performance may be lower or higher than return data quoted herein.

Past performance is not indicative of future returns. This information should not be used as a general guide to investing or as a source of any specific investment recommendations and makes no implied or expressed recommendations concerning the manner in which an account should or would be handled, as appropriate investment strategies depend upon specific investment guidelines and objectives.

Information presented herein is subject to change without notice and should not be considered as a solicitation to buy or sell any security. This document contains general information that is not suitable for everyone. The information contained herein should not be construed as personalized investment advice.

There is no guarantee that the views and opinions expressed in this document will come to pass. Investing in the stock market involves gains and losses and may not be suitable for all investors. No representations, expressed or implied, are made as to the accuracy or completeness of such statements, estimates or projections, or with respect to any other materials herein.

Under no circumstances does the information contained within represent a recommendation to buy, hold or sell any security, and it should not be assumed that the securities transactions or holdings discussed were or will prove to be profitable.

There are risks associated with purchasing and selling securities and options thereon, including the risk that you could lose money.

Certain information contained herein constitutes "forward-looking statements," which can be identified by the use of forward-looking terminology such as "may," "will," "should," "expect," "anticipate," "project," "estimate," "intend," "continue," or "believe," or the negatives thereof or other variations thereon or comparable terminology. Due to various risks and uncertainties, actual events, results or actual performance may differ materially from those reflected or contemplated in such forward-looking statements. Nothing contained herein may be relied upon as a guarantee, promise, assurance or a representation of the future.

Market value information (including, without limitation, prices, exchange rates, accrued income and bond ratings furnished herein) has been obtained from sources that Reyna Capital believes to be reliable and is for the exclusive use of the client. Market prices are obtained from standard market pricing services or, in the case of less liquid securities, from brokers and market makers. Reyna Capital makes no representations, warranty or guarantee, express or implied, that any quoted value necessarily reflects the proceeds that may be received on the sale of a security. Changes in rates of exchange may have an adverse effect on the value of investments.

Indices represent unmanaged, broad-based baskets of assets. They are typically used as proxies for overall market's performances. Index returns typically assume that dividends are reinvested and do not include the effect of management fees or expenses. You cannot invest directly in an index. Without prior written permission of index owner, this information and any other index-related intellectual property may only be used for your internal use, may not be reproduced, or redistributed in any form and may not be used to create any financial instruments or products or any indices.

This information is provided on an "as is" basis, and the user of this information assumes the entire risk of any use made of this information. Neither the index owner nor any third party involved in or related to the computing or compiling of the data makes any express or implied warranties, representations or guarantees concerning the index-related data, and in no event will index owner or any third party have any liability for any direct, indirect, special, punitive, consequential or any other damages (including lost profits) relating to any use of this information.

For additional information about other indices or strategies mentioned here, you may contact us at brando@reynacap.com.

No part of this material may be copied, photocopied, or duplicated in any form, by any means, or redistributed without Reyna Capital's prior written consent.